

My family used to receive at least 2 calls a day. The majority were during dinner. I would ask them to remove my name, "please." They would say they would. I would get calls from AT&T (I am not a customer and will never be now) and once again request to have my name removed from their data base. They said it would take 30 days. This went on for over a year. I started asking to talk to a supervisor. They started to hang up on me. Just hang up! I couldn't *69 to call them back because they blocked their number. What can I do to combat this with the new regulations the FCC wants to put in place. The Indiana law has solved our problems. We get one call every two weeks now. We can have an uninterrupted family dinner now. I have a phone to communicate with family and friends, as well as to conduct "my wanted" business. The first amendment does not give someone the right to walk into my living room uninvited and solicit me on a product I didn't ask about. There is no difference. My home is a sanctuary away from the noise of the busy society we live in. Please allow us to keep it as such.
